The History of Pie

Michael David Egeland 11th

They're simple, they're American and are around during Thanksgiving. Everybody saves room for pie, but the pies we know today are a fairly recent addition to a history that goes back as long as mankind has had dough to bake into a crust and stuff to put inside it.

In medieval England, they were called pyes, and instead of being sweet, they were mostly filled with meat like beef, lamb, wild duck, magpie pigeon and were spiced with pepper, currants or dates. Historians trace pie's initial origins to the Greeks, who are thought to be the originators of the pastry shell, which they made by combining water and flour.

Vex Robotics Tournament

Kasen 11th grade

Last Saturday Bailey Hartje and Kasen Stromstad won their Vex robotics tournament with their Alliance, 1532F, a High School Bemidji team. Fisher's team 7458F got a 136 in the skills competition (skills is where a robot tries to score as many points as possible by itself in one minute) however they were beaten out by Bemidji 218 Ways to Breakdown 1532F with a score of 137 just one more point than Fisher.

Along with the victory fisher also received the excellence award which is the highest honor in a robotics tournament. With both of those awards, they received an invitation to the state and national competition in March. Their next competition is at the Northland College in Thief River Saturday, December 3rd.

Thanksgiving Foods!

Kaydee Volker Grade 10

The most common Thanksgiving foods in the United States are Turkey, mashed potatoes, stuffing, and pies! But in different parts of the U.S. the food options kind of differ! In the South some people consider their Thanksgiving complete with corn pudding and bacon infused brussel sprouts, in New England their table is complete with Parker House rolls. Also, some of us Midwesterners love our green bean casserole! Some alternatives people have rather than turkey as their main dish is roasted chicken, ham, prime rib, or brisket. Some other common desserts are apple pie, carrot cake, bread pudding, and pecan pie.
